What Is Today's Manifestation of Protocol 10 of the Learned Elders of Zion?

Sivbert SANGWA • July 21, 2024

The "Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion" is a document that outlines a secret plan for global domination by a covert group. Despite being debated, the provisions of the document have been evident in global geopolitics, shaping the course of history. Protocol 10, titled "Preparing for Power," is notable for its detailed strategies aimed at subverting morals and controlling the world. This brief article examines the key elements of Protocol 10 and explores how its strategies have influenced global history and contemporary geopolitics.

The Emphasis on Outward Appearances

Protocol 10 begins with a focus on the importance of outward appearances in politics: "Governments and people are content with outside appearances." The idea is that the masses are easily deceived by superficial displays of power and that their representatives are often preoccupied with self-indulgence. This observation leads to the strategy of keeping the true intentions of the ruling elite hidden while manipulating political processes behind the scenes.

In today's world, this manipulation can be seen in the way political leaders and governments use media and social networks to project carefully crafted images that appeal to the public, all while enacting policies and making decisions that may not align with these outward appearances. The rise of populist leaders who engage in showmanship, the use of disinformation campaigns, and the prioritization of image over substance in political discourse reflect the ongoing influence of such strategies in contemporary geopolitics. The Bible condemns these deceptive practices as we read in Proverbs 12:22 states, "The Lord detests lying lips, but he delights in people who are trustworthy."

Concealed Authority and Taxation

The protocol stresses the importance of controlling authority and taxation subtly, without openly discussing these issues: "It is of the greatest importance to take cognizance of this detail; it will be of assistance to us when we come to consider the division of authority of power, by the dwelling, in the population." By avoiding direct discussion of these topics, the covert group maintains flexibility and control without attracting attention.

Many authoritarian regimes have used hidden taxes and veiled authority to control populations. For example, oppressive tax policies and clandestine governance were tools used by feudal lords and monarchs throughout history. Today, similar strategies can be seen in the implementation of complex tax codes and regulations that obscure the true tax burden on citizens. Governments may use indirect taxes, such as VAT or hidden fees, to generate revenue without drawing attention.

Additionally, modern authoritarian states often exercise control through bureaucratic regulations and opaque governance structures that limit accountability and transparency, thereby maintaining their grip on power while keeping the populace in the dark. The benefit or influence of this covert group lies in their ability to manipulate economic and political systems to their advantage. By keeping tax policies and authority concealed, they can extract wealth from the population without inciting resistance. This allows them to amass resources and power while maintaining the facade of legitimate governance. Such tactics enable the covert group to strengthen their control over the state, ensuring that any opposition is weakened or preempted through financial and bureaucratic means. Ultimately, this consolidation of power facilitates the implementation of broader strategies aimed at maintaining dominance and suppressing dissent.

The Cultivation of Political Apathy and Control

The protocol asserts that creating a blind, obedient populace is crucial: "We shall create a blind, mighty force which will never be in a position to move in any direction without the guidance of our agents." The strategy involves fostering political apathy and dependency among the masses by ensuring that their leaders are indebted to or controlled by the covert group.

Throughout history, various regimes have employed similar tactics to maintain control. Totalitarian states often suppress dissent and manipulate public opinion to consolidate power. The rise of authoritarianism in the 20th century can be seen as an implementation of such strategies. In contemporary times, similar manipulative tactics can be observed, with Illuminati agents purportedly embedded in all spheres of society—social, economic, political, and religious. These agents work to shape public opinion, influence economic policies, control political leaders, and even sway religious doctrines, thereby ensuring a broad and pervasive influence over global events and trends.

Manipulating National Crises

The protocol outlines the use of national crises to manipulate public opinion and solidify control: "When we have accomplished our coup d'état, we shall say then to the various peoples: 'Everything has gone terribly badly; all have been worn out with suffering. We are destroying the causes of your torment - nationalities, frontiers, differences of coinages.'" This strategy involves presenting the covert group as the solution to the crises they helped create.

This tactic has been employed by various leaders who have used crises to justify consolidating power. The aftermath of World War I and the rise of fascist regimes in Europe exemplify how national turmoil can lead to authoritarian rule. In contemporary times, this problem-reaction strategy is manifesting on a global scale. Current global challenges such as climate change, pandemics, economic instability, and geopolitical conflicts are being used to create a sense of urgent crisis. These crises are then leveraged to push for centralized global governance as the ultimate solution.

For instance, the COVID-19 pandemic has led to calls for greater international cooperation and centralized health regulations, which some argue could pave the way for a global health authority. Similarly, climate change is often cited as a justification for establishing global environmental policies and governance structures. Economic instability and financial crises are prompting discussions about a global financial system under unified control. These orchestrated crises create a reaction where the public, overwhelmed by chaos and uncertainty, is more likely to accept the idea of a global government led by this covert group, which promises stability, peace, and solutions to these seemingly insurmountable problems. This covert group presents itself as the savior, offering to resolve the very crises they have engineered or exacerbated. By doing so, they aim to establish a global despotism, where nations, exhausted by continuous turmoil, willingly submit to a single ruler who guarantees order and prosperity. This manipulation of global challenges to justify a unified global governance reflects the ongoing influence of strategies outlined in Protocol 10.

The Role of Liberalism and Constitutional Governments

Protocol 10 argues that liberalism and constitutional governments are tools for creating discord and weakening state power: "Liberalism produced Constitutional States...a school of everything that serves to destroy the personality of State activity." By promoting constitutional states and democratic processes, the covert group aims to sow discord and make governments ineffective.

Liberalism and democracy have played a significant role in removing the divine authority of kings, creating a gap that allows covert groups to influence and control global politics. The shift from monarchies, where kings ruled by divine right, to democratic forms of governance has led to political pluralism and at times, instability. This transition has dismantled the centralized, divinely sanctioned power structures and replaced them with more fragmented and contested systems of governance.

For example, the dissolution of the Soviet Union and the subsequent political turmoil in Eastern Europe illustrate how liberal reforms can lead to significant upheaval. Similarly, the Arab Spring, which initially sought democratic reforms, resulted in political instability and civil conflicts in countries like Libya, Syria, and Egypt. Additionally, the rise of populist movements in Western democracies, such as Brexit in the United Kingdom and the election of populist leaders in countries like Brazil and the United States, reflects ongoing political fragmentation and instability.

These movements are often marked by a deep distrust of traditional political institutions and elites, leading to further polarization and discord within societies. This atmosphere of instability and fragmentation provides fertile ground for covert groups to exert influence and control over global politics. By promoting liberal ideologies and democratic processes, these groups can destabilize traditional forms of governance and create opportunities to install puppet leaders, manipulate electoral processes, and control political discourse, ultimately steering global events to align with their agendas.

Control Over the Presidency and Through Electoral Processes

A significant part of Protocol 10 outlines a plan to control presidential offices by selecting candidates with compromising pasts and focuses on manipulating electoral processes to install puppet leaders: "We shall arrange elections in favor of such presidents as have in their past some dark, undiscovered stain." By controlling the election of presidents and other key officials, the covert group can ensure that these leaders are controllable through blackmail and other means, compliant and beholden to their agenda.
The manipulation of electoral processes by the Illuminati is often alleged to involve several key strategies aimed at ensuring the election of presidents or leaders who are either members of the Illuminati or individuals lacking moral values who will comply with Illuminati directives.

First, the Illuminati might engage in extensive disinformation campaigns to sway public opinion. This can include spreading false information or propaganda through various media channels to discredit opponents or create a favorable image of their preferred candidates. By controlling the narrative, they can influence voters' perceptions and decisions. Second, the Illuminati are believed to use financial power to influence elections. They might fund political campaigns, providing substantial resources to their chosen candidates. This financial backing can be crucial in securing media coverage, organizing large-scale events, and mobilizing voter turnout, thereby increasing the chances of their candidates' success.

Third, the Illuminati may engage in more direct forms of election interference, such as voter suppression or tampering with voting systems. This can include creating barriers to voting for certain demographics, manipulating voter registration databases, or even hacking electronic voting machines to alter vote counts in favor of their candidates. Fourth, the Illuminati often create tensions and conflicts within society to destabilize the political landscape. By orchestrating social unrest, economic crises, or international conflicts, they can create an atmosphere of fear and uncertainty, such a climate can benefit candidates who are perceived to support strong, authoritative figures who promise stability and order, often those backed by the Illuminati. These crises can also distract from electoral manipulations and make it easier to push through controversial candidates.

Additionally, the Illuminati are said to use kompromat (compromising material) to control politicians. Various intelligence agencies have been known to use such tactics to influence political leaders. By gathering damaging information about candidates, they can ensure compliance through blackmail. This tactic ensures that even if a candidate is not a direct member of the Illuminati, they can still be manipulated to follow their agenda out of fear of exposure or scandal. Finally, the Illuminati might also leverage their influence within governmental and judicial systems to challenge or overturn election results unfavorable to them. By placing their agents in key positions of power, they can create legal challenges or recounts are resolved in their favor.

Through these methods, the Illuminati can effectively manipulate electoral processes to install leaders who will implement their agenda, maintain their power, and suppress any opposition.

Destruction of the Family and Educational Systems

The protocol emphasizes the destruction of the family and educational systems to create a docile population: "Inculcating in all a sense of self-importance, we shall destroy among the goyim the importance of the family and its educational value." By undermining these foundational institutions, the covert group weakens societal cohesion and individual critical thinking. In today's context, we can observe these strategies manifesting through various trends. The traditional family unit is increasingly challenged by cultural shifts that prioritize individualism and self-fulfillment over collective family values. Additionally, educational systems are often criticized for focusing more on standardized testing and rote learning rather than fostering critical thinking and moral development.

Furthermore, the promotion of gender equality, excessive child rights, and LGBT movements are seen as tools to dismantle family unity. While these movements are portrayed as promoting fairness and inclusion, they are aimed at eroding traditional family roles and divine structures. For instance, the emphasis on child rights is used to undermine parental authority, leading to a breakdown in family discipline and cohesion. Similarly, the push for gender equality and LGBT rights, though essential for social progress, can be manipulated to create divisions and conflicts within families, weakening their unity and stability. The rise of social media has also contributed to a sense of self-importance and instant gratification, further eroding the communal and educational structures that once underpinned society. These trends collectively result in a populace that is more susceptible to manipulation and control, aligning with the objectives outlined in Protocol 10.

Centralized and Unquestioned Governance

The protocol advocates for a centralized and unquestioned governance structure: "A scheme of government should come ready-made from one brain." This strategy involves preventing any form of democratic discussion or alteration of the governing plan to maintain control and coherence in their rule.

Centralized control is a hallmark of autocratic regimes. The formation of the UN and its branches can be seen as a plot program for global governance. The covert group operates behind the UN and global systems, using these institutions to foster its agenda of centralized control and unquestioned authority. By embedding their agents within these organizations, they influence international policies, promote globalist ideologies, and ensure that national sovereignties are gradually eroded in favor of a unified global governance structure. This enables them to enact their strategies on a worldwide scale, maintaining power and control while projecting an image of humanitarianism and international cooperation.

Establishing Despotism

The ultimate aim of Protocol 10 is to establish a global despotism: "When the peoples...will clamor: 'Away with them and give us one king over all the earth who will unite us and annihilate the causes of disorders.'" The protocol envisions a world where nations, exhausted by conflict and mismanagement, willingly submit to a single ruler who promises peace and order. From a Christian viewpoint, this aligns with the biblical prophecy of the Antichrist. Revelation 13:7-8 describes a future ruler who will gain authority over all nations and be worshipped by the people. This prophecy warns believers to be vigilant and discerning about the rise of such a figure.

Conclusion

Protocol 10 of the "Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion" outlines a sinister plan for global domination through deception, manipulation, and control. While the document remained unknown to many, its themes resonate with historical and contemporary strategies used by various regimes to consolidate power. This world with a single ruler, often termed as the New World Order, is biblically prophesied as the Antichrist reign. Today's global trends reflect this direction, signaling that the end is nearer. However, as the corrupt world strives to inaugurate Lucifer, the wrath of God (the seven bowls of the wrath of God) is at hand and soon to be poured out on God's enemies. Christians will not experience the wrath of God; our hope lies in the evident imminent rapture. Ephesians 6:12 reminds us, "For our struggle is not against flesh and blood, but against the rulers, against the authorities, against the powers of this dark world and against the spiritual forces of evil in the heavenly realms." Therefore, it is essential to remain discerning and uphold the truth, recognizing the signs of moral and political corruption in our world. To escape the coming judgment, seek refuge in Christ before it is too late.
